

“Overcoming One of Love’s Rare Actual Weaknesses”

Love can make you sleepy. I suspect this is because love tranquilizes pride. Since the two emotions compete with each other, and since love is still, increasing one’s supply of love can actually slow you down.

Love is choice. Since it is non impulsive, it is necessary to tell love what to do. It is possible to manifest any emotion or sensation, but it is also possible to manufacture accelerated and expanded retention.

So long as there is more love than pride, one’s instincts will be easy to program. Simply choose, without questioning, to experience elevated adrenaline, expanding quantity of retention, and accelerating rate of retentional speed.

Aggression may impair one’s speed by entrapping one’s attention within one’s instincts. It reinforces pride.