

It could be scried,

- What would most deter a similar incident from being possible in the future
- What would most alleviate any resulting trauma
- Who was culpable on loyalty or fairness for the incident
- In what way and how culpable were they

I had previously thought, when pursuing astral crimes, that:

- the incident should be scried: free will inhibited, pleasure stolen, & pain caused
- the culpable psyches isolated, including %s of pain caused etc contributed by who's culpability
- mind control element isolated and/or debunked, including the difference between recognizance and astral slavery

If scried by fairness alone, it would just be isolated what % of the damage was done by who's culpable psyche. If also on loyalty, it would depend on the hierarchy. Some hierarchies would scry the culpable psyche only on loyalty. Some would scry what punishment would most deter the offense. Some would scry what would most long and short term satisfy the offended party.